Description of this case: We are investigating the possible(not yet confirmed) death of Christopher Dorner and cover-up by both CBS and the Los Angeles police department (LAPD) to ensure the truth never gets out. We have a good reason to believe the assassination was done WACO-style(WACO Compound raid) where the log cabin of which he is assumed to have stayed at was to be burned by the police due to orders from the Sargent or higher level police commissioners. Both police radio audio recorded by scanners and part of the CBS live video audio, before the live feed was forcefully cut out due to police orders, all suggest that despite the fact that there believed to be hostages taken, that the top level police ordered the log cabin to be burned to the ground killing all of the hostages along with the supposed serial killer Dorner.

Wikipedia Background

Christopher Dorner was born in New York state and grew up in Los Angeles County, where he attended elementary school at Norwalk Christian School. At Cypress High School he beat-up one of his teachers.[\[2\]](#)

Dorner graduated from Southern Utah University in 2001 with a major in political science and a minor in psychology where he was football running back from 1999 to 2000. Dorner is a former Naval Reserve lieutenant who was once deployed to Bahrain.[\[3\]](#) \

LAPD

Dorner joined the Los Angeles Police Department in 2005, and completed police academy training in February 2006. He was on the streets of LA as a probationary officer before he was deployed as a reservist to Bahrain for 13 months. When he returned he was paired with Sergeant Theresa Evans to complete his probationary training. Evans reported Dorner began weeping in the patrol car and said he wanted to go back to the police academy for retraining.

Evans gave him an unsatisfactory rating and requested that he be removed from the field until he showed improvement. The next day Dorner retaliated against the sergeant by falsely reporting Evans kicked a mentally ill suspect during an arrest several days earlier.[\[4\]](#) Three hotel employees who witnessed the incident were interviewed by detectives from the LAPD's internal affairs bureau and said they did not see the training officer kick the man. The investigator's report said: "The delay in reporting the alleged misconduct coupled with the witness' statements irreparably destroy Dorner's credibility, and bring into question his suitability for continued employment as a police officer."[\[5\]](#) Dorner was dismissed in 2008 for "making false statements about his training officer".

Dorner was known as a "hot head" on the force and had a history of complaints against other officers.

Exhibit A provides evidence that before the news crew in the helicopter was forced to cut off their live feed due to a police order. Towards the end also proves that top officers were giving the orders to burn down the log cabin with both the alleged cop killer Dorner with the hostages said to be inside. This provides proof that the officers cared more about their own lives than the lives of the hostages and people as they just decided to burn down an entire log cabin which isn't necessary and creates a environmental risk of forest fires, which California is famous for their forest fires in earlier news reports.

Exhibit B - Screenshot of video posted by a YouTube user claiming to have a scanner recording of the police radio transmission during the hold up with the possible alleged killer Dorner – Screenshot taken around 6:14 AM CST

The screenshot shows a YouTube page with a video thumbnail in the center. The thumbnail depicts two police officers standing near a white police car at night. One officer is holding a rifle. In the background, there's a speed limit sign that reads "LIMIT 40". To the left of the thumbnail, there's a sidebar with a "GUIDE" section and a "This is your guide" message. A blue "Got it!" button is visible. Below the thumbnail is a video player bar showing the timestamp "0:01 / 5:16". The main video area has a title "Cops torch cabin where Christopher Dorner was held up" and a channel name "SDSaxMan". The channel has 48 videos, 3,255 subscribers, and 477 likes. There are also "Like", "Subscribe", and "Share" buttons. Below the video details, there's a note about the video being published on Feb 12, 2013, and a description mentioning a scanner recording of a cop killer named Christopher Dorner.

Police audio from the siege on Christopher Dorner reveals a deliberate plan to burn down the cabin in which Dorner was trapped, with one LAPD officer heard to say, “fucking burn this motherfucker,” before police discussed their intention to, “go ahead with the plan with the burners.”

The audio was captured on police scanners as well as being picked up by a local news broadcast.

“Alright, we’re gonna go ahead with the plan with the burners,” one officer says.

“Copy,” replies another.

“Like we talked about,” the first officer responds.

“The burners are deployed, and we have a fire,” says another officer moments later, before the police dispatcher repeats the statement.

Within minutes of the fire starting, police note that the cabin is “starting to collapse.”

Police are also heard discussing if they are ready to “bring fire”.

“Burners” is police slang for tear gas canisters, which are known to cause fires.

In a separate clip carried by a local news channel, police are heard to say, “Fucking burn this motherfucker,” and “burn that fucking house down.” This audio appears to be from earlier in the siege following the initial shootout between Dorner and cops.

The fact that police would burn down the cabin in which Dorner was trapped, in a similar fashion to how the infamous Waco siege ended in 1993, was predicted ahead of time in a video Alex Jones made hours beforehand. I made the same prediction in a Facebook post before reports even emerged that the cabin was on fire.

Given the ammunition inside the cabin, LAPD officers knew that the tear gas would lead to a fire and instead of waiting it out, chose instead to carry out a summary execution. That’s not to excuse the actions of Dorner, but the fact that police now view burning suspects to death as a reasonable way to apprehend a suspect is shocking.

As Mike Adams writes today, “If the LAPD is going to abandon its mission of public safety and function as an armed vigilante justice squad, dishing out death sentences to those it believes are guilty — without a trial or anything resembling due process — then they might as well throw away all their badges as just call themselves the LA Gang Squad. Because that’s how they’re acting.”

A spokeswoman for the San Bernardino county sheriff’s office said that Dorner’s charred remains were found inside the cabin, but the LAPD still refuses to confirm that a body has been discovered.

One of the biggest manhunts in Southern California history appeared come to an end Tuesday night as authorities surrounded a smoldering cabin in the San Bernardino Mountains in which ex-police officer Christopher Dorner was believed to be hiding after a dramatic shootout with sheriff's deputies.

Dorner had publicly targeted police, promising "unconventional and asymmetrical warfare" against officers and their families and had been the subject of a massive manhunt that focused over the past five days on the area surrounding Big Bear Lake, a popular Southern California vacation spot.

Dorner barricaded himself in the cabin on Tuesday afternoon after gun battles with Fish and Wildlife officers and San Bernardino County Sheriff's deputies in which one deputy was killed and another injured.

Authorities reported hearing a single gunshot from inside the cabin before it caught fire Tuesday evening.

"That burned cabin has not been entered," Los Angeles Police Department Commander Andrew Smith said in a press conference Tuesday night. "It's too hot in there."

Smith said earlier reports that a charred body had been discovered in the cabin were false and stressed that no body had yet been recovered, adding that should a body be recovered from the cabin, it could be days or weeks before a positive identification can be made.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's spokeswoman Cindy Bachman delivered a later press conference and repeated the message that Dorner's death had not been confirmed, although deputies believe the man who fired upon deputies Tuesday was inside the cabin when the fire ignited.

Deputies would remain at the cabin site overnight, she said.

"They have a very large crime scene to process and that's what they'll be doing," she said. "At the same time, they are mourning one of their brothers, who was killed today."

In addition to the deputy killed Tuesday, Dorner is suspected of murdering a Riverside police officer last week and an Orange County couple Feb. 3.

His truck was found Thursday near Big Bear, and authorities over the weekend combed the mountains for him.

On Tuesday, a high-ranking San Bernardino County Sheriff's official said Dorner had held four people hostage, possibly for days, at a home in the 1200 block of Club View Drive before fleeing the residence Tuesday in a stolen maroon Nissan Rogue, according to a high-ranking San Bernardino County sheriff's official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

One of the bound hostages managed to break free after Dorner fled the residence and called 911. Dorner reportedly crashed the Nissan and carjacked a white Dodge 4-wheel-drive pickup, the sheriff's source said.

Quick investigative overview based on the evidence the exhibits, testimony, media reports, and facts

First of all let's examine the facts from all the evidence gathered in the investigation.

First of all Exhibits A-C show conclusive evidence that the top police officials were caught giving orders to the lower ranking officers to burn the log cabin down even when there is a possibility of hostages or that the person in the log cabin could have not been correctly identified as Chris Dorner which would make the suspect an innocent man. The police investigative unit has yet to confirm whether the charcoal dead bodies contain the evidence that it was Dorner that was killed in the log cabin burning.

Exhibit B, along with some quotes in the transcription from a news reporter in Britain named Paul Joseph Watson, it provides a conversation between officers that was given the order to burn down the log cabin.

The only other reported live news feed being cut off was during the infamous attack and raid on the WACO compound church over their members being labeled an extremist. The burning of the log cabin was caught on the news camera which has a similarity to the WACO compound. CS gasoline was used on little children by the police with assistance from military and ATF. In this case the hostages and possibly not even Dorner was killed in the fire. The police have still yet to confirm this by the time this report was released. In any event we receive this information an addendum will be written bringing out more from our investigation.

So here are the facts laid out bare before a candid world:

1. "A spokeswoman for the San Bernardino county sheriff's office said that Dorner's charred remains were found inside the cabin, but the LAPD still refuses to confirm that a body has been discovered." This means the claim could be illegitimate and that the remains may not be that of Dorner's. We have yet to hear from the forensics staff from the Crime Scene Investigation.
2. Multiple sources prove the legitimacy of the claim beyond a doubt that the police were ordered to burn down the log cabin even though it would put the environment and lives at more risk. One source includes the live news feed, before being knocked out seconds later, proves a officer was cussing then ordering to burn down the log cabin. Then the police radio audio is the second cherry on top of the cake that proves the legitimacy of this claim. So the conclusive evidence proves beyond a doubt that police burned down the log cabin which could have put the population of LA at risk of a man-made forest fire. This would be a deliberate attempt to commit a suicidal mission which would put people at risk. All police officers have to assess the situation before they take the most appropriate action. The orders by the top officers showed a disregard for the lives of their people and even hostages during any crises.
3. The police ordered the live feed be cut off with an excuse that the criminal suspect could be watching and use this to escape even though news choppers have always been used in the capture of criminals on Cop reality TV shows. This also draws suspicion that it was a deliberate attempt to cover-up what they are planning to do which was to put the lives of the people of LA at risk of a forest fire and kill innocent people to protect the officers but not the people. The police's motto was always "protect and serve" but is now becoming a question as to whether they are upholding their own oaths to protect and serve their people.

4. From our investigation there appears to be a deliberate mishandling of the situation of the criminal case during the standoff between possibly Christopher Dorner and the law enforcement. Question is should these officers ever be trusted in a example of a standoff with a criminal suspect that has nuclear bombs with hostages on the side? If these officers preformed the same orders and actions as with Dorner then likely LA or even California would be blown to kingdom kong with a nuclear bomb. These officers should be held accountable for their actions based on putting the entire population at risk for arson¹. The intentional, unnecessary and malicious burning of public or private buildings, that can endanger the lives of the general public and neighbors, just to capture one criminal, is use of criminal arson under an justifiable excuse of capturing a single dangerous criminal when there were other less aggressive alternatives. Burning homes and log cabins is not excessive force but is far worse then that. It is deliberate arson.

¹ At Common Law, the malicious burning or exploding of the dwelling house of another, or the burning of a building within the curtilage, the immediate surrounding space, of the dwelling of another.

Modern legislation has extended the definition of arson to include the burning or exploding of commercial and public buildings—such as restaurants and schools—and structures—such as bridges. In many states, the act of burning any insured dwelling, regardless of whether it belongs to another, constitutes arson if it is done with an intent to defraud the insurer. Finally, the common-law rule that the property burned must belong to another person has been completely eliminated by statute in some states. Conclusion and verdict regarding the investigative matters

There is not enough evidence to produce a final conclusion on our investigation into the assassination of Christopher Dorner and the officers actions that have put the people's lives at risk by burning the log cabin along with a deliberate coverup by cutting off the live news feed under a excuse.

The very nature of this coverup is standard in what happened at the WACO Compound church in Waco, Texas. The similarities are the media usually making out the police in that situation look like heroes when they killed innocent people and can claim collateral damage when the very motto and purpose of the police is suppose to protect and serve the people of their jurisdiction. The police are public servants that put their lives at risk everyday to save lives, not destroy them with burning houses and log cabins when the alternative could have been less dramatic, destructive, reckless and controversial. We conclude that the officers didn't plan to rescue any hostages and were told to just burn them all to hell without any good reason as to why they should burn down a log cabin with live ammunition that could create a big fire that had the chance of causing a forest fire that could burn many of homes in a single day.

We will continue to investigate before creating an addendum to this report to be released in the near future. Our verdict on the evidence that the police were ordered to burn down the log cabin is conclusive and warrants a criminal investigation into the Los Angeles Police Department for deliberately and knowingly putting many lives at risk to stop one dangerous criminal that can easily be defeated by a SWAT team with riot shields and riot gear. Our verdict is that the one officer using foul language then ordering the burning of the log cabin was inappropriate and proves deliberate intent in the killing of innocent people in order to catch one bad guy.

Our investigation conclusion is not final and can be appealed by the general public or rebuttal documents. We provide the evidence as is and will continue to investigate and ask questions to those whom witnessed what really happened. More evidence will be documented and provided in future addendum's as this case develops. Once the case is closed then our verdict and conclusion is solid. This case shall remain open until the final conclusion to satisfy our investigation. Once the evidence has been collected and stored, and the final conclusion and verdict written, then the case shall be closed.
